“ Mark was my big brother. By birth he was 12 years my senior. Nevertheless, he took me under his wing and shared his life experiences. He taught me many things beginning with his passion for fishing, camping, cooking, and creating things out of wood and metal. Fishing was paramount among these, starting when he was old enough to hold a fishing pole. His love of life was contagious to those around him, not the least of which was his love of wine and wine making. He also shared his skills as an accomplished machinist, carpenter, and wood worker with those willing to learn. He loved his family deeply. Having worked for years as a plant manager for Fraser Manufacturing, Kelsey Hayes, Harley Davidson, and Borg Warner, to name a few, he earned the respect of all his employers and associates. There was never a problem too big or too small for him to resolve. As for his cooking, he knew what tasted good together and could make a gourmet dish out of anything available in the kitchen. When it came to fishing, he had an innate sense of how to get any fish out of the water into his boat. Popular in our family was bowling, and he was accomplished at this as well. We enjoyed many competitive games together. We miss Mark in this life and look forward to being with him for eternity.
